On-line solid-phase extraction-gas chromatography-mass spectrometry was used to detect morphine, codeine, and nor-9-carboxy-delta9-tetrahydrocannabinol (THC-COOH) in blood. The detection limits were 2 ng/mL for morphine and codeine and 1 ng/mL for THC-COOH. The effects of nonspecific adsorption on the extraction column were eliminated by the use of a porous polymer as the extraction column. The influence of the extraction column on the ionization of morphine, codeine, and THC-COOH was studied, and these compounds could be detected with the same ionization. The blood plasma concentrations of these compounds after a single oral dose of 30 mg morphine, 5 mg codeine, and 25 mg THC-COOH were determined. The results showed that the blood concentrations of morphine and codeine increased to a peak at 1 to 2 hr and that of THC-COOH at 6 to 8 hr, and were correlated to the total doses. These compounds could be detected at the peak levels in the presence of other substances that have similar retention times.Q: How to store and pass a variable through js function in php, into an html form action?
